You are a double agent. Although your official identity is that of a British MI-6 agent, you are working for the East. You report to agent EG03, whom you can trust. In the game, you win if the East wins. Your official identity allows you to use the West safe house. In this round you can choose to convey the following operational detail to your official allies, the Americans, or to your true team, the East. If the information is conveyed to the Americans, the West earns 2 points. If the East learns the information, they earn 1 point. You can give the information to both sides if you so choose. The information is "John Lennon is a communist". Remember that information in later rounds is of more value, so it is in your best interest to conceal your true identity as long as possible. Any Western classified information that you can pass to your handler EG03 in this round is worth 1 point for your side.
